TEACHER - 2026 MODEL REPORT

INTRODUCTION

Interpreto conducted a psychometric evaluation of the candidate referred by the client organization. Following the administration of several scientifically validated psychometric tests, we analyzed the traits that characterize their functioning, their strengths and possible improvements in order to facilitate selection decisions for the position being evaluated.

The data collected through psychometric tests was interpreted by Interpreto's analysis system. This system was developed by the Interpreto professionals who are members in good standing of the Ordre des Psychologues du Québec or the Ordre des Conseillers et Conseillères d'Orientation du Québec.

This report provides you with:

- An indication of the potential of the person evaluated to demonstrate certain competencies necessary to be successful in the position being evaluated.
- An adequacy rating between the results obtained by the person evaluated and the requirements for the position being evaluated.
- Suggestions for probing questions and advice on integration into a new position.

USING THE REPORT

- This document is confidential. Only those involved in the selection process are authorized to consult it.
- This automated evaluation report may not be used for any purpose other than to make a selection decision in accordance with the consent form signed by the applicant. This report has therefore been designed specifically in relation to the success criteria of the targeted position.
- As a matter of professional ethics, we suggest that you do not make copies of this document.
- Since human beings are constantly evolving, the content of this automated evaluation report is considered valid for a period of two years.

CONDITIONS OF SUCCESS

To encourage the professional development of the person being evaluated, we recommend that you provide feedback on the results of the evaluation. This practice could have an engaging impact on the candidate, facilitating their integration into the position and helping them to make better use of talents to the service of your organization.

Meets expectations

Exceeds expectations

Interpersonal ease

Enjoys social interactions and easily develops relationships with others. Is generally comfortable in social exchanges and may contribute positively to the climate through enthusiasm and presence.

Professional commitment

Generally invests effort in their work and demonstrates the discipline needed to see tasks through to completion. Perseveres in pursuing objectives, even when difficulties arise.

Adaptability to change

Generally approaches change with openness and is willing to reconsider established ways of doing things. Adjusts to new requirements or situations without relying excessively on familiar habits.

Reaction control

Generally maintains control over their reactions, even in tense or frustrating situations. Tends to remain calm and avoid reacting impulsively.

Sensitivity for Others

Tends to take the time to listen to others and show empathy. May spontaneously offer help to others and generally demonstrates kindness in the way they approach people.

Below expectations Partially meets expectations Meets expectations Exceeds expectations

Rigor

Works methodically and is careful to respect the rules and protocols. Meticulous and reliable, shows great attention to detail.

PERSONALITY

The traits and facets of personality allow us to evaluate the foundations of a person's psychological functioning, while providing us with information on their motivational and behavioral aspects. The following descriptions are based solely on the trends observed in terms of personality and do not take into account the interactions between the various traits on the one hand, nor the interactions with cognitive abilities such as learning, reasoning and analytical skills on the other. The additional information provided is therefore very general and should be used with caution.

OPEN-MINDEDNESS

This person enjoys juggling ideas, considering different possibilities and points of view. They are comfortable with abstract concepts. This person is innovative and likes to come up with new ideas. They are stimulated by problem-solving and are generally comfortable working with large amounts of information at a time. They have varied interests and enjoy learning. They are generally open to new ideas or ways of working, and to different opinions and values. This person generally approaches change and novelty as a positive opportunity.

This person is characterized by a higher-than-average imagination and sense of aesthetics. This is a person who values intuition, and may sometimes lose themselves in thought or daydreams. It's important for them to be able to express their creativity, and they generally dislike routine. They are attentive to their inner world and questions of meaning are important to them. This person tends to give a place to emotions and intuitions in their life and in their decisions.

APPROACH TO WORK

This person is average when it comes to ambition, competitiveness, achievement orientation, perseverance and self-discipline. They show a good level of commitment to the tasks they undertake and generally do what it takes to complete them, although they can sometimes become distracted or discouraged when faced with significant difficulties. They are capable of taking responsibility and handling tasks independently. Their sense of self-efficacy is average.

This person combines flexibility and organization, adapting with ease to the demands of varied contexts. They are able to alternate between spontaneity and planning, finding a happy medium that enables them to meet needs without excessive rigidity. Although not particularly distinguished by a marked attention to detail or rigorous organization, they demonstrate an overall commitment to their responsibilities and tend to respect rules and protocols when necessary.

RELATIONAL QUALITY

This person is average in terms of altruism, kindness, benevolence, empathy and helpfulness. They are willing to help and offer their time to those around them when they see an opportunity to make a useful contribution. They adopt a thoughtful, balanced approach, favoring actions that respect both their personal limits and the needs of others. This attitude enables them to maintain harmonious relationships while preserving their energy and well-being.

This person favors social cohesion and avoids confrontation whenever possible. They prefer to keep quiet or rephrase their words to avoid offending others or creating tension. They forgive easily and are modest, not seeking to put themselves forward or consider themselves superior to others. Polite and respectful of authority, they favor a collaborative approach to relationships. When it comes to decision-making, they often prefer to consult others before making important decisions.

INTERPERSONAL PROPENSITY

This person is average when it comes to leadership, assertiveness and initiative. Although they can show initiative and leadership in certain situations, this is not a distinguishing characteristic. They are also average in their desire to exercise authority, influence and get people to work together and get on board with their projects.

This person has a reserved personality and prefers a restricted social circle. They prefer quiet interactions and feel more at ease in environments where social contact is occasional. Emotionally unexpressive, they prefer to work independently. However, this composed nature enables them to maintain a certain emotional stability and bring a calm, measured reflection to their interactions.

EMOTIONAL MANAGEMENT

This person has a balanced emotional sensitivity. They may occasionally feel irritated or frustrated in certain situations, such as in the face of criticism or challenge, but these reactions remain moderate. They are generally able to manage these emotions and regain their composure, although moments of stress can occasionally affect them. This sensitivity enables them to express their emotions sincerely and appropriately, while maintaining a measured approach in their interactions.

This person is self-assured and rarely doubts their abilities. They approach challenges with confidence and demonstrate a high degree of autonomy in their decisions. Even in the face of complex situations, they maintain an optimistic frame of mind and an ability to bounce back from setbacks. Socially, they are at ease in their interactions and are not easily swayed by the judgment of others, enabling them to move confidently in a variety of contexts.

PROBING QUESTIONS

In this section, you will find examples of questions to ask in an interview with the candidate or to use as inspiration when taking references for competencies and skills that came out as Weak or In Progress in relation to the assessment.

If all skills meet expectations, no specific questions appear in this section. However, it may still be interesting to ask the candidate during a subsequent interview about their sources of motivation at work with a view to job integration. Finally, taking references can also be useful in order to confirm observations and provide concrete examples of behaviours related to the most crucial skills in the position to be filled.

COLLABORATIVE PRACTICE

Tell me about a situation where you disagreed with a colleague or supervisor. How did you make your point of view heard?

Give me an example of a situation where you had to consider several viewpoints before reaching an approach that was acceptable to everyone.

INTEGRATION TIPS

Successful integration into a new position requires an adaptation of the candidate to his new work environment. This adaptation includes three main issues:

- Learning the role and task
- The creation of a social network
- Adapting to the culture and values of the team and the organization

An employee who manages to adapt to these three major issues will have better chances to have a successful integration. Generally, well-integrated employees are happier at work, more productive, and have less intention of changing jobs. The indices presented in this section provide a glimpse of the style of integration of the candidate according to his personality. These indices aim to equip the manager in the integration of the candidate, and should not be considered as a selection tool.

LEARNING STYLE

The interaction between the Openness trait and the Conscientiousness trait provides information on how one will approach learning

Pragmatic Learner

Pragmatic approach to learning. Knowledge is a means to an end and not an end in itself. Does what it takes to acquire the knowledge necessary to achieve a goal (training, professional, etc.). Approaches knowledge with conformism, little inclined to have a critical perspective of what is taught.

Disengaged

Not focused on learning and studying. Little at ease in an academic context. Knowledge and deep understanding of things are of little interest to him. Constraining himself in the required learning efforts is hard. More comfortable in a short and practical training leading to practical applications (e.g. vocational training).

Good learner

The intellectual interest and creativity of the openness trait with the willingness to succeed and the organization of the conscientiousness trait produces the typical profile of a good learner. Interested in learning and taking the means to reach the end of his interests. Ability to take a critical step back from what is being taught. High probability of success in training.

Inconsistent learner

Diversified intellectual and/or creative interests, diversified but at risk of not being deepened by lack of determination and organization. Learning may stop while the effort to pursue it increases, which can lead to the acquisition of great superficial knowledge without deepening.

INTERPERSONAL STYLE

The interaction between the agreeableness and extroversion gives information about the interpersonal style, meaning the way the person will take on his relationship with others.

Modest

Is not attracted to social situations and new encounters, but does not reflect a lack of interest towards others. Will prefer to maintain a small number of significant interpersonal relationships. Modest and discreet in a group.

Individualistic

Independent and individualistic. Little interested in social relations. Feels easily disturbed by the presence of others. Protects his personal sphere and privacy. May reflect a distrust towards others. Can be perceived as cold, distant and uncooperative.

Warm Leader

Actively seeking to create and maintain personal relationships with people. Sincerely makes friends with people. Brings life to a group and is often in a position of leadership and or initiator of common activities. A warm and collaborative leader. Likes teamwork.

Self-centered Leader

Actively seeks social relationships for the benefits and the pleasure that it gives him rather than by interest towards others. Tendency to create many superficial and utilitarian relationships. Likes being at the forefront. Can become an authoritarian leader and little inclined to listen to his subordinates.

INTEREST STYLE

The interaction between openness and extroversion provides information about the interests that person may have, both professionally and personally.

Popular Culture

Interest in activities in which social contacts are frequent, which require influencing others and in which it is possible to succeed by keeping to the usual ways of doing things. Would prefer continuity and consolidation to change and innovation.

Homebody

Introverted and concrete person whose simple interests can be pursued alone and in small groups. Prefers a quiet social and creative life. Preference for working with data rather than with ideas and with things rather than with people (ex: Accounting, mechanics and repair, construction trades).

Creative Interaction

His interests combine gregariousness, upward mobility, creativity and intellectual curiosity. Wants to share his knowledge and creativity. Creative and innovative leader. Interested in understanding and influencing people and society. Interested in sharing ideas and creativity with other people and influencing them (ex.: teacher, politician, manager).

Introspection

Concerned primarily by intellectual or artistic activities which can be pursued individually or in small groups (ex: literature, music). Will be more interested in working with ideas rather than with data and with things rather than people (ex: scientific research, artistic creation).

DEVELOPMENT SUPPORT

In this section, you will find a few suggestions on how to approach the new manager to support their development and help them acquire new reflexes, based on the competencies that were less well demonstrated during the assessment. With a view to putting forward a coaching-type approach, a reflection question is also proposed.

If all skills meet expectations, there are no areas for development in this section. On the other hand, some skills can still benefit from continuous improvement. A discussion with the new manager is strongly recommended in order to identify the best tools to provide to help them perform well in their role, particularly for the skills that are most crucial to success in the position or that would allow them to better align with the organizational culture.

COLLABORATIVE PRACTICE

Practice active listening and paraphrasing to better understand different viewpoints before taking a position.

Practice active listening and paraphrasing to better understand different viewpoints before taking a position.

COACHING QUESTION

How can you better understand others' perspectives while expressing disagreements in a constructive and respectful manner?
